

Together we can grow a world leading primary health care system

The establishment of Medicare Locals represents a turning point in Australia's health reform program. It is also a critical opportunity for the primary health care sector to demonstrate their capacity to lead the evolution of our health system, develop a broader range of services and improve their delivery to patients across a variety of health settings.

PwC has the experience and expertise to support you on this journey – at every step of the way.

PwC's National Health Practice

PwC's National Health Practice is a team of over 100 health specialists working full time in health in Australia. We have diverse backgrounds –clinicians, hospital administrators, policy experts, program directors, as well as actuaries and thoughts leaders in system and service design. We work with our clients on diverse projects, from the development of the most appropriate health policies and strategies, to on the ground implementation. We understand how the health system fits together, the required outcomes and how patients and the diverse participants in the health system are impacted.
